Dominican Republic

June 16, 2009.

Mr. Bob Ottinger,
International Baseball Association, Inc.
Beverly Hills, CA.
USA.

Dear Bob: I am excited about our recent trip to Nicaragua where we were able to experience first hand all the excitement and passion the Nicaraguan people has for Baseball.

I have no doubt in my mind about the potential Nicaragua has for producing MLB talent under the right conditions for training and coaching young baseball players in that country.

This is why I need to bring up for your attention one of our conversations during this recent trip. As you know, our office has worked trying to improve the quality of local baseball programs/leagues in Nicaragua for the last four (4) years. Out of this experience, I can tell you that a critical area for the success of your project will be the hiring of well trained coaches and scouts to run your academy's operations.

Just for you to be aware, we consider that the lack of such personnel is the main reason why Nicaragua is not producing more players for MLB Clubs. There are just not enough coaches who know how to run a proper development program for young players. The same applies for trained scouts who can identify talent among young players.

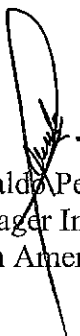

In these areas, our expertise could be a significant help for your future investment there. Our office could coordinate a training program for local Nicaraguan coaches in our academies in DR. We could also coordinate training for scouts from Nicaragua in Dominican Republic. For this, you would only need to provide the necessary air tickets to the selected personnel chosen to be trained.

We could also assist you providing highly qualified instructors to check and provide professional advice on your operations in Nicaragua for limited periods of time (15 to 30 days visits). Such instructors could include people as Rafael Avila and others excellent instructors in pitching, hitting and scouting. For these cases, you would have to provide lodging, meals and local transportation for these instructors.

I hope you consider these ideas, and provide me with the chance of elaborate about them for your partners in this important project. Best Regards,

 Ronaldo Peralta,
 Manager International Baseball Operations
